Herringswell is an attractive small village set in Suffolk countryside in between the horse racing town of Newmarket and historic cathedral city of Bury St Edmunds.

The village benefits from excellent road connections via the A14 and A11 dual carriageways, Bury St Edmunds being just 12 miles west, the horseracing town of Newmarket being approximately 8 miles east, the university city of Cambridge again 22 miles to the east. The A14 and A11 also provides good access to the east coast ports, the midlands and Stansted airport (44 Miles) and London via the M11.

Herringswell Manor is situated just outside the village and is understood to have been built as a private home with outbuildings in 1906, however it is understood that there has been a house on the site in various forms since the Saxon times. It is approached via a tree lined driveway with electronic gates leading to the main house and gardens. Herringswell Manor was developed by the City & Country Group who have a long history in converting and restoring historic and unique dwellings.
